Take an Incredible Walk through American Industrial History at the EAIA Annual Meeting May 18-21, 2011
at
The Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn, Michigan

This is an EAIA Annual Meeting not to be missed! The Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village are described as, “the most significant collection of the American experience ever assembled,” and as, “the one place you must visit in your lifetime”. The Henry Ford Museum showcases the people and ideas that have fired our imagination and changed our lives. The museum houses an incredible variety of exhibits including over 100 clocks spanning four centuries, outstanding examples of pewter and silver from Paul Revere to Tiffany & Company, train engines, stagecoaches, an outstanding collection of early stationary steam engines, early machine tools, an incredible collection of early tractors, farm machinery, motorcycles and of course an incredible collection of cars. At that’s just a small sample of what’s on display within the museum. At 90 acres Greenfield Village is the largest outdoor museum in America. There you can visit the tinsmith shop, the carding mill, the Armington and Sims machine shop, the pottery shop, the weaving shop, and visit numerous historic buildings including Edison’s Menlo Park laboratory, Harvey Firestone’s farm and the Wright Brother’s bicycle shop. Numerous historic homes, buildings, and shops line the streets of this amazing outdoor museum.

We’re staying at a DoubleTree Hotel which is less than 10 minutes from the museum complex, and we’ve got a great rate of $99/night for our meeting. The airport is about 20 minutes away. Put the dates on your calendar. Invite a friend or two to join us for this sure to be memorable EAIA Annual Meeting. For more information watch the EAIA website or go to www.TheHenryFord.org.
